Q&A

Nick Jonas

The ‘Jealous’ singer, 22, will host the Kids’ Choice Awards (March 28 on Nickelodeon)

You’ve had a good run since you, Joe and Kevin disbanded the Jonas Brothers in 2013.
Stepping out on my own and not having my brothers with me all the time has been an adjustment. But I’ve had more positive experiences than negative ones. I’m thrilled how this past year has gone.

Do your brothers tease you about your skin-baring photos?
They have definitely taken one or two shots in a playful way. But I expected it. We’re brothers. It’s our jobs to give each other crap.

Are you excited to host?
It was definitely a dream as a kid to be a part of this show. I grew up a huge SpongeBob SquarePants and Rocket Power fan.

Do you think you’ll be slimed?
I feel like it’s an honor. It’s a rite of passage.

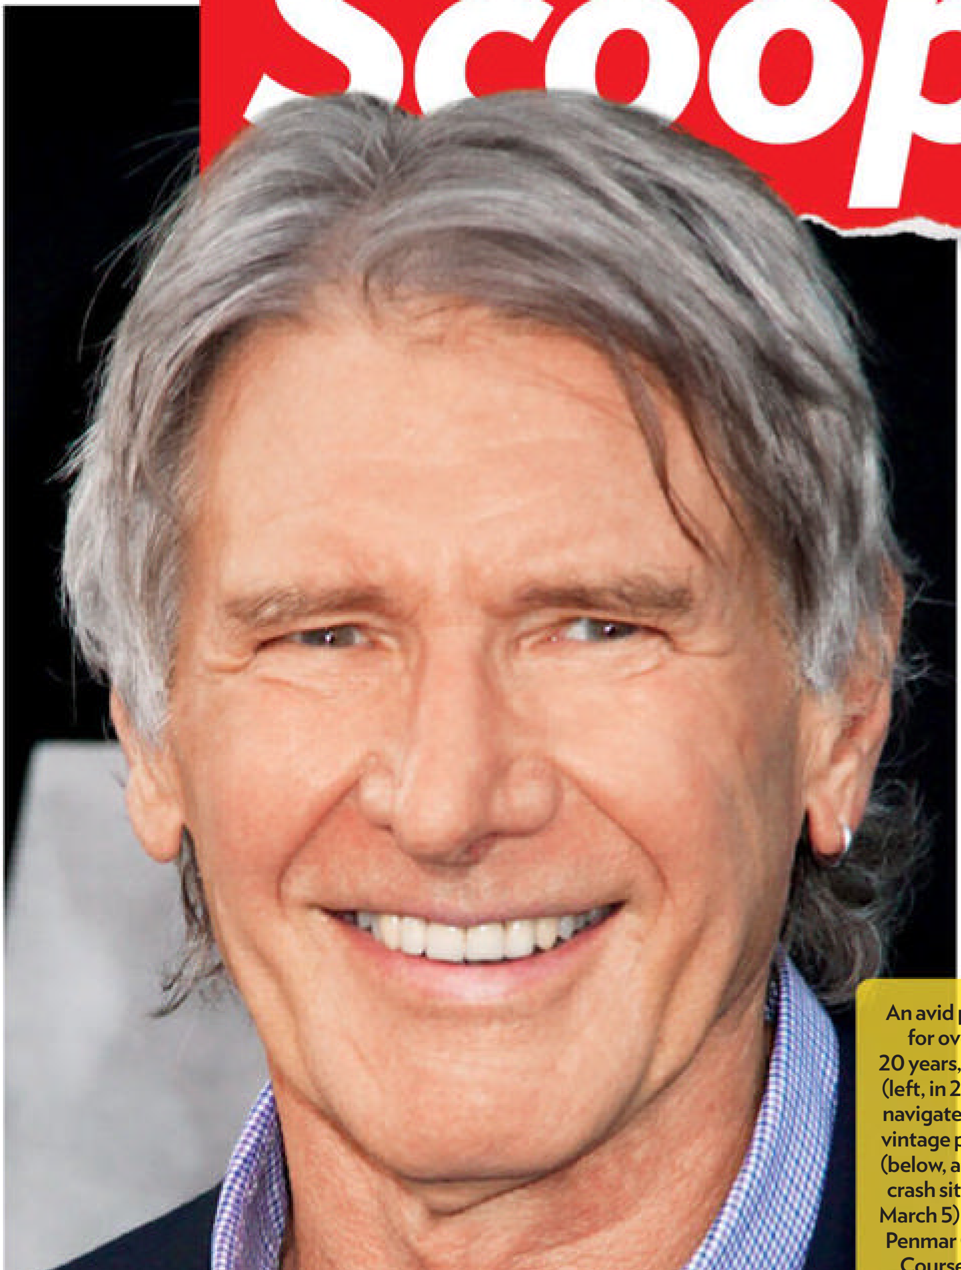
ALL THE NEWS & BUZZ FROM HOLLYWOOD

EDITED BY MARY MARGARET



HARRISON FORD
LUCKY TO BE ALIVE

BY ELIZABETH LEONARD

WHEN HARRISON FORD took off from Santa Monica Airport in his WWII vintage plane on March 5, the setting was picture-perfect for one of the movie star pilot's cherished scenic afternoon getaways: cloudless blue sky, scant wind and panoramic views of the Pacific below. But when engine trouble forced the 72-year-old Star Wars actor into an emergency crash landing in a densely populated area of L.A., the scene seemed plucked straight from one of Ford's action movies. "I saw a plane descending as I was running, and then I heard a 'boom' when it was falling," says Ben Hubley, →

An avid pilot for over 20 years, Ford (left, in 2014) navigated his vintage plane (below, at the crash site on March 5) onto Penmar Golf Course in Venice, Calif.

Ford's son Ben, 48, and Flockhart (in 2003) rushed to the hospital as soon as they heard news of the crash.

who was jogging nearby at the time. A longtime pilot respected in aviation circles, Ford expertly guided the struggling plane onto a nearby golf course, clipping a tree and coming down hard on the No. 8 tee. Visibly stunned and covered in blood from a five- to six-inch gash in his scalp about the "size of a pancake," as an eyewitness on the scene told PEOPLE, Ford was rushed to a nearby hospital.

Immediately, Ford's wife, actress Calista Flockhart, 50, raced to the hospital, arriving just after the ambulance. Over the next few days, she left only to take care of their 14-year-old son Liam. "Calista spent most of the weekend by Harrison's side," says a source. "She arrived early every morning and returned home late every night. She was under stress." Those who know Flockhart and Ford, who wed in 2010 after more than eight years together, aren't surprised by the dedication and paint the once-unlikely duo as one of Hollywood's most enduring love stories. "They routinely go everywhere together as a couple," says a source who knows them socially. "Despite his enormous fame and their age difference, they are a tight, superloving, down-to-earth family. Flying is something they've shared. This whole thing must be terrifying."

While Ford's publicist said his injuries, which reportedly include a broken pelvis, "are not life threatening," it remains unclear when Ford will be able to leave the hospital. What is certain? It's unlikely he'll hang up his pilot wings anytime soon. "[Flying is] where I feel engaged and comfortable and free," the actor told PEOPLE in 1998. As for Flockhart, she's grown to share his passion. "Calista likes the process, she likes what she sees from the air, she likes seeing me happy," Ford has told PEOPLE. "I think a lot of it has to do with that she loves to see me doing something I love."

How He Survived

AN AVIATION EXPERT BREAKS DOWN THE CRASH

Ford's crash landing has in fact helped solidify his status as a respected pilot. "Harrison did everything perfectly," aviation expert Rick Dake says of how Ford handled his plane's apparent engine failure. In World War II, "a lot of new pilots crashed that [same model of] airplane. If the engine stopped, the plane would want to flip over on its back. Harrison Ford made a 180-degree turn with the engine seizing up on him. That alone is testament to the great ability he had." Dake suspects the actor made a calculated decision to attempt to land on the golf course. (Locals have protested how close the airport is to houses.) "He was able to keep that plane away from the houses and land it with the least impact on the community," he says. "He was doing exactly what an excellent aviator would do."

GEORGE & AMAL CLOONEY

THEIR NEW LIFE IN NEW YORK

They already spend time in London, Los Angeles and Italy, and now George Clooney and his wife, Amal, are adding New York City to their itinerary. The couple, who wed in Venice in September, will be spending quality time in Manhattan this spring, with Amal, 37, taking a position as a visiting law professor at Columbia University and George, 53, shooting the Jodie Foster-directed thriller Money Monster on Wall Street. Not that they can't spend time apart in the Big Apple. On March 2 George went solo to the city's SeriousFun Children's Network gala (where he declared Amal "the smart one"), and he lunched with pal Bill Murray the next day. But they still find time for date nights. On March 6 the pair got cozy at tony Café Boulud, where they dined on black truffles. "They were seated in an alcove of the restaurant," says an observer. "It was very romantic and private. They were laughing and talking the whole time. They were having a wonderful time."

3 CONFESSIONS WITH ERIN & SARA FOSTER

THE DAUGHTERS OF MEGAPRODUCER DAVID FOSTER STAR IN VH1'S BARELY FAMOUS, A PLAYFUL SEND-UP OF FAME AND REALITY TV

Their childhood was like Troop Beverly Hills. Sort of…

SF: I sold Girl Scout cookies to Dr. Dre!

EF: But we weren't raised with a silver spoon. Dad used to say to us, "I'm rich; you are not rich. Go work hard."

They once got dissed by Madonna.

SF: One day our dad had Madonna in the studio, and he was like, "You might want to come over after school. There's going to be someone awesome to see."

EF: I tried to copy one of her [famous] outfits so when she saw me she would think I was cool.

SF: She was not impressed!

Their show is fiction—but based on fact.

SF: Kate [Hudson, who has a cameo on the show] was down for the idea of poking fun at how a celebrity can get whatever they want. She thought it was hysterical.

EF: Our stepsisters [models Gigi and Bella Hadid] play Sports Illustrated models who our characters hate. We take something with a seed of truth and exaggerate it to make it ridiculous.

THE STAR, 44, NARRATES DISNEYNATURE'S FILM MONKEY KINGDOM, OUT APRIL 17

Fey with daughters Penelope, 3, and Alice, 9, in 2014.

Which monkey in the movie is your favorite?
"Maya and then Grandpa. He's really old. Well, he's 40, and in monkey world—and in Hollywood—that's old. He's really cute."

You worked with Disney! Are you pro- or anti-princess?
"Frozen of course is a really big deal. I love Disney, and there's a lot in our house. From princesses up to Disney XD, my two girls are fully immersed in the lifestyle."

When it comes to nature, are you Jane Goodall or Carrie Bradshaw?
"We have family in Ohio, so that's the farthest into the wild that we get. But both of my kids love animals—Penelope spends a good portion of the day pretending to be a cat. They're city kids, so they're always begging to go to the country."

Best part of doing a voice-over?
"You can do it in your pajamas, and you don't have to comb your hair."

BETHANY HAMILTON

Baby on (Surf) Board

When she was just 13, she lost her left arm in a shark attack while surfing. But a month later, Bethany Hamiton was back riding waves. Now six months pregnant, she's still not ready to hang up her board. "I don't know how much longer I'll be able to surf because my belly is starting to poke out," says Hamilton, who wed youth pastor Adam Dirks in August 2013. The only thing that makes the 25-year-old Kauai resident "nervous" about motherhood is one-armed diaper changes. "Luckily," she says with a laugh, "in Hawaii you can just let your kids run around naked." —JOHNNY DODD

NIKKI REED

MY BROTHER, MY HERO

Nikki Reed may be the famous one in her family, but it's her little brother Joey, 15, who is the star to her. "He's a really rad kid," she says. "He inspires me every day." One of the reasons: teaching her about people with autism. "He's high-functioning," she says of Joey, who was diagnosed with the disorder at age 2. "He wants people to know that not all people with autism are the same. He's his own person. He doesn't want a label. More than anything, he is just a kid." Ever since Joey was young, his family (which includes parents Cheryl and Seth and brother Nathan) has always focused on his strengths. "He's one of the most honest, loving, sensitive and transparent kids I've ever known," says Reed, 26. "He's insanely smart and has a remarkable memory." As spokesperson for the Lindt Gold Bunny Celebrity auction (lindtgoldbunnyauction.com), which benefits Autism Speaks, Reed says, "People make assumptions about autism. But you have to treat each person as an individual—that's really a priority for Joey." —LIZ McNEIL

Reed (in 2014 and, below, with Joey) is "superproud" that he's recently taken up running. "He runs 12 miles a day. He's outrunning all of us."

INSIDE THE SEQUEL

Maze Runner

With an army of young-adult-lit fans and $100 million in receipts, last fall's Maze Runner was a hit. Its sequel, Maze Runner: The Scorch Trials (out Sept. 18), aims to top Act 1 by dropping Thomas (Dylan O'Brien) and his weary band into a lawless territory called the Scorch as they confront WCKD, the all-powerful organization playing with their lives. Though the details are top secret, O'Brien teases one major change: "There will definitely be more female characters!" —ALYNDA WHEAT

ROYAL BABY WATCH

THE BUZZ
IS IT A GIRL?

DID PRINCESS KATE UNWITTINGLY hint that she knows the gender of George's little sib? Browsing childrenswear at London kids' boutique Amaia recently, "she was looking at all the girls' clothing," co-owner Segolene Tresca tells PEOPLE. "She was very interested."

While the couple insist they don't know the gender, the men in the royal family have made their wishes known. Shortly after news of Kate's second pregnancy broke in September, Prince Charles told a well-wisher, "I hope it will be a girl this time." William, for his part, "would like a girl," Kate confessed while pregnant with George in 2013. As her April due date draws near, British oddsmakers say bets are heavily favoring girls' names, with Charlotte and Alexandra on top. One thing is clear, a longtime royal observer says: "A girl would immediately become a fashion icon. Every little bow or ribbon will be cooed over. Kate will have a lot more shopping to do."

PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

Endometriosis is an isolating disease because people don't want to talk about it. It is something deeply private and personal. I have always displayed symptoms of endometriosis, which is when the uterine lining cannot be expelled with a woman's period and grows outside the uterus. In high school, the symptoms—bloating, cramping, severe pain in the abdomen area—were strong enough to keep me home from school several days a month. I missed a week of my life every month for 23 years. When I was finally diagnosed at 36, I had surgery which removed the excess tissue that had taken over my womb and wrapped itself like a tourniquet around my intestines. This is one of the leading causes of infertility in women. At 38, I was told that I would never have children naturally and had only a 10- to 15-percent chance with in vitro. When you're staring down the barrel of your 40th birthday and hear you can't have kids because this disease went undiagnosed for so many years, it's devastating. It galvanized me to start the Endometriosis Foundation of America. Our goal is to raise awareness so that no young girl has to wonder what is wrong with her like I did for all those years. My daughter Krishna [now 5] was a miracle. I want her and all women to know their body is theirs to take care of. We need to be proactive about our health and not accept that a disease should just be accommodated. —REPORTED BY LIZ McNEIL

Inside Jill Dillard's Baby Shower

The TLC reality star is expecting a baby boy at the end of March

19 Kids and Counting's Jill (Duggar) Dillard spent a Feb. 28 snowstorm being showered with love for her soon-to-be-born son. She was joined by 50 guests—including husband Derick Dillard—at A Mommy's Butterfly Midwifery in Tontitown, Ark., for a fete thrown by her midwife teacher, Venessa Giron. Partygoers indulged in cake (and piña colada cupcakes!) and wrote words of encouragement on a "labor of love" board. Guests were encouraged to donate towards supplies for the couple's planned home birth or give gift cards. "We are ready now," says Jill, 23, who was also showered the next weekend at a small party at the Olive Garden. "It's superexciting."

Jill and Derick Dillard show off a new baby blanket.

A DOZEN COOL THINGS TO SEE, HEAR, READ AND DOWNLOAD THIS WEEK

No. 1 Empire

Not hooked on this soap about a dysfunctional dynasty? It's time to catch up!

TV DRAMA Initially Empire's breakout success could be explained in one word: "Cookie." Just out of prison and hell-bent on being a thorn in the side of her ex-husband, black music mogul Lucious Lyon, she's played by Taraji P. Henson as a creature with tentacles that grasp at every chance and choke every enemy. The diva has a perfect foil in Terrence Howard as terminally ill Lucious, whose soft hiss of a voice is like whiskey sprayed through an atomizer. But the show is driven less by corporate shenanigans—the label is preparing an IPO—than by the tender yet cutthroat relationships of Lucious, Cookie and their three sons. Family bridges are burned, then rebuilt. Still, if Cookie has anything to do with it, some of those are likely to be detonated in the finale. (FOX, March 18, 8 p.m.)

No. 2 Cinderella

A tale as old as time and with new magic

MOVIE FAMILY How does director Kenneth Branagh reinvent the tired story of a girl dumped on her ash by a vile step-clan? Happily, he doesn't—he just puts total faith in the tale. Cinderella arrives in sumptuous fashion, starring Lily James (Downton Abbey) as Ella, kind but not cloying. The same is true of Prince Charming, played by Game of Thrones' Richard Madden. There are many lovely touches, including Ella's mouse pals and Cate Blanchett's witchy but gorgeously costumed stepmommie dearest. This one's a winner—take the family and vacuum out the cinders later. (For more on Cinderella, see page 62.) (March 13, PG)

No. 3 Nathan Sykes, 'More Than You'll Ever Know'

MUSIC POP Judging by this first solo release, Sykes will be remembered as more than a boy bander or Ariana Grande's ex. Over retro horns, jazzy guitars and innocently lovesick lyrics ("You're the closest thing to heavenly nature"), Sykes proves he has some seriously soulful pipes. Who knew?

Sykes, 21, goes it alone after the Wanted.

Still the pride of Greendale Community College: Alison Brie and Joel McHale.

No. 4 Community

YAHOO COMEDY A sitcom so clever it tipped toward the intimidatingly insular, the intensely loved, little-watched Community has moved to Yahoo for a new season. The show, which always had the hum of a neurotically compulsive hive that might kill its queen with too much jelly, plays a bit flat without castmates Donald Glover and Yvette Nicole Brown. But that's just the first two episodes. There are still unmissable, off-the-wall bits, including a Portuguese Gremlins rip-off, Knee-High Mischief. (Streaming March 17)

No. 5 iZombie

TV DRAMA Bright, disciplined medical resident Liv Moore (Rose McIver) goes to a party and lives to regret it—after she dies, that is. A zombie fever sweeps through all the partiers before they seemingly self-destruct. Reborn a monster who wants to eat brains, sole surviving zombie Liv—honey, you know your name is so ironic it's sad, don't you?—gets a job at the coroner's. (Free meals.) Then it dawns on her that she has real forensic talent. What is this, The Walking Veronica Mars? Yes, and it's a lot of fun. (CW, March 17, 9 p.m.)

Who could ask for anything morgue? iZombie's Rose McIver and Rahul Kohli.

No. 6 Allison Moorer, Down to Believing

Breaking up but not breaking down

MUSIC COUNTRY The autobiographical album is nothing new, but Moorer isn't kidding around: Believing, which is more about wounds received than wounds healed, touches not only on her breakup with husband Steve Earle but on the experience of raising their autistic son—summed up by "Mama Let the Wolf In," a song both hard-strumming and self-castigating. But Moorer, a superb singer, has too much edge, drive and energy to wallow, and her lyrics pare the throbbing pain down to a minimal plainness: "I lost my crystal ball/Found me a wrecking ball." Creedence Clearwater Revival's "Have You Ever Seen the Rain," which she covers here, fits right in. (March 17)

Songs about toughing out the hard times.

No. 7 The Royals

Mayhem, majesty and malice at the palace

TV DRAMA "It smells of sex in here!" So proclaims Helena, queen of E!'s madcap version of Great Britain, upon barging into her unruly daughter's bedroom. But, because Her Highness is played by Hurley, Helena's disapproval is delivered with a note of glimmer-eyed appreciation for all things carnal. She'd smack her lips if they weren't glossed. Royals, E!'s first scripted series, is good trash, a monarchical soap that banishes plausibility to the Tower. In the premiere the death of the heir to the throne is treated as a terrible bother that might rank with, or below, a Corgi that needs to be let out. (E!, March 15, 10 p.m.)

No. 8 Carly Rae Jepsen, 'I Really Like You'

MUSIC POP The catchiest thing Jepsen has released since her bubblegum breakout single "Call Me Maybe," the similarly crush-inspired "Like You" sounds like an instant classic. Sustained by frothy synths and pleasurably mindless repetition—a whopping 67 "really"s in 3.5 minutes!—this is a strong if premature contender for song of the summer. Spring, for sure. We really like it.

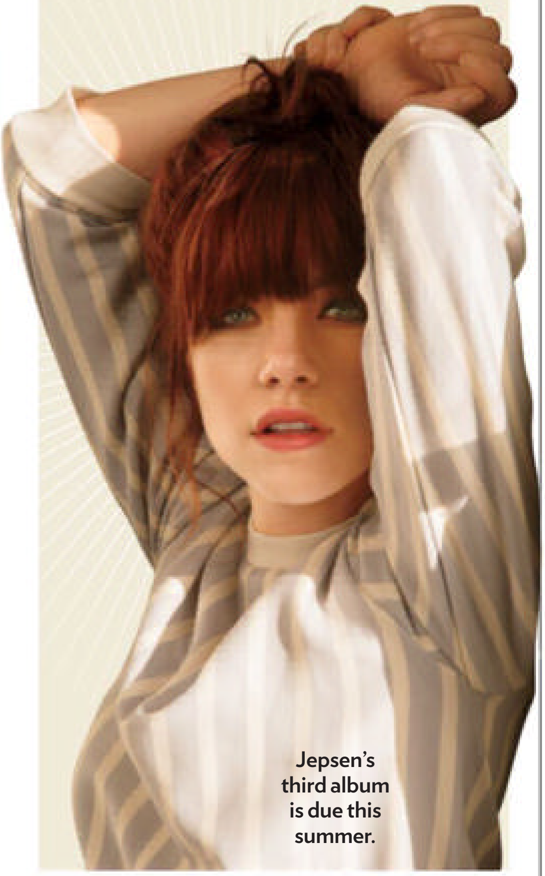
I REALLY LIKE YOU



Jepsen's third album is due this summer.

Maika Monroe is on permanent lookout.

No. 9 It Follows

MOVIE HORROR Jay (Maika Monroe) is stuck with a bizarre curse passed on through intercourse: She's followed by ghouls visible only to her. They're easy to escape—taking human form, they walk slowly in an unnerving, unswerving line and appear to be clumsy, even inept—but they're dogged. Once caught, you're toast. None of this makes one lick of sense, but Follows hooks a viewer with the pure illogical dread of a nightmare. It's some kind of classic. (March 13, R)

CLOCKWISE FROM TOP LEFT: FRANK W. OCKENFELS/E! ENTERTAINMENT; MATTHEW WELCH; RADIUS TWC

Is Shep Rose finally growing up?

No. 10 Southern Charm

TV REALITY Sweet tea, a Senate race and fresh scandal—welcome back to life among the deceptively genteel and moneyed set of Charleston. Some of the cast have matured in season 2 (eternal frat boy Shep opened a restaurant, and Cameran is now a newlywed), but there are still enough love triangles to make a belle blush behind her fan. (Bravo, March 16, 10 p.m.)

No. 11 Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt

COMEDY Co-created by Tina Fey, this NETFLIX peculiar but sporadically very funny sitcom stars The Office's Ellie Kemper as Kimmy. Liberated from the bunker she shared with three other women—followers of a cult leader who assured them Armageddon had hit—Kimmy heads to New York City (like many more conventional, just as mindlessly upbeat sitcom heroines) and finds work with a society lady. Of course, vain, neurotic Jacqueline Vorhees (30 Rock's Jane Krakowski) is the one who's not free. When Kimmy tells her she looks like a million bucks, she tears up: "I know you didn't mean that to be hurtful." (Now streaming)

Kemper is gonna make it after being shut away in a bunker.

BOOK OF THE WEEK

Ian Caldwell
The Fifth Gospel

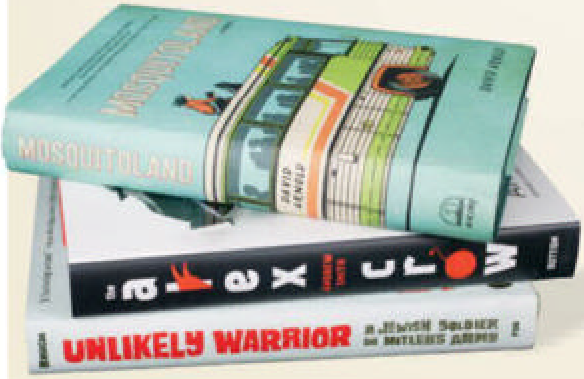
NOVEL A quirky curator is murdered shortly before his Vatican exhibit about the Shroud of Turin is due to open. Police arrest Simon, a priest, but his brother, also a priest, is convinced Simon is innocent and starts an investigation. This smart, suspenseful thriller by the coauthor of The Rule of Four is a must for Dan Brown fans.

Jill Alexander Essbaum
Hausfrau

NOVEL Anna lives in a Swiss town with a loyal husband and sweet children—and she's dying of boredom. So, like others before her (Madame Bovary, Anna Karenina), she turns, ever more recklessly, to lovers and lies. Sexy and insightful, this gorgeously written novel opens a window into one woman's desperate soul.

George Hodgman
Bettyville

MEMOIR "At least once, everyone should see someone through," Hodgman writes. "All the way home." This lovely memoir is the story of his turn: the months the veteran editor spent back in Paris, Mo., caring for his 91-year-old mother. He's a gay man and recovering addict who hides hard truths with humor; she's from "a generation that existed before feelings were spoken of." Slowly—convincingly—they come to terms with each other. You won't finish their tale dry-eyed.



GREAT NEW YOUNG ADULT BOOKS

David Arnold

Irreverent teen Mim Malone narrates this memorable account of running away from her remarried dad in Mississippi to see her beloved, possibly dying, mother in Ohio.

Andrew Smith
The Alex Crow

There's no way this sci-fi tale about a war refugee at an American summer camp and a doomed 19th-century Arctic exploration should work—but it's a surreal masterpiece.

Georg Rauch
Unlikely Warrior

While his mother hid Jews in their Vienna attic during World War II, the author unwillingly served the Third Reich. An astonishing rediscovered memoir.

The Bachelor's Chris & Whitney

READY for LIFE on the FARM!

HE'S A 'SIMPLE' FARMER. SHE'S A NURSE IN THE BIG CITY. NOW CHRIS SOULES AND WHITNEY BISCHOFF ARE READY FOR THEIR NEXT CHAPTER: LIVING IN A SMALL TOWN AND STARTING A FAMILY. 'WE JUST WANT TO BE A NORMAL COUPLE'

By AILI NAHAS

Photographs by ARI MICHELSON

Critical fans, catty women, crowded dates: Falling in love on The Bachelor has always presented a unique set of relationship hurdles. But for Chris Soules and Whitney Bischoff, who got engaged last November at the end of his season of the hit ABC reality romance show, navigating the logistics of starting a life together may be their biggest challenge. Bischoff, 29, a Chicago-based fertility nurse, will have to uproot her life to move to the tiny town of Arlington, Iowa, where her fiancé, 33, has deep roots and owns and operates a profitable corn farm. But while other contestants balked at the idea of moving to a town of 429 people—even for "Prince Farming," as he was anointed by the show—the bubbly blonde says she doesn't see it as a sacrifice. "It's always been important for me to stand on my own two feet," she says. "But I would not have accepted the proposal if I wanted something different. I'm so in love." The couple—who will spend the next several months in L.A. while Soules competes on Dancing with the Stars—sat down with PEOPLE to talk about their future.

Now that the cat's out of the bag, what are you looking forward to?

WHITNEY: Being a normal couple! It doesn't have to be fancy. It will be nice not to have any more hard goodbyes.

CHRIS: We've been in hiding! I want to not feel like anyone is in charge of what we do next.

Chris, you had a very strong connection with your final three girls: Kaitlyn, Becca and Whitney.

CHRIS: It's not normal to fall in love with three women. But I was there. I was honest with my feelings, and I was honest with them. I had the good fortune of having a tough decision.

You said getting rid of Kaitlyn was like throwing darts. Were you really that conflicted about your decision?

CHRIS: Maybe that was a poor choice of words or a bad analogy, but it was how I felt. [In my mind] I was dating one person at a time; that's the way it was to the end. They were the only ones in my life when I was with them.

You seemed like you really wanted it to work with Becca, but she couldn't give you what you needed. What happened?

CHRIS: Becca had some challenges with commitment. She's not ready to fall in love, and she's not ready to settle down. Clearly I had strong feelings for her, but I had to start looking at it from a logical perspective. The more we talked, I just saw that it would be a tough transition for her, especially to even consider living my lifestyle.

Did Whitney seem more open to it?

CHRIS: After she came to my home

WITH THIS RING
After saying goodbye to Becca Tilley, Soules got down on bended knee for Bischoff.

All About the Bling!

"Chris liked that it was strong, but he also wanted it to feel sweet and feminine," says designer Neil Lane of the 4-carat ring (featuring an emerald-cut diamond surrounded by more than 100 smaller diamonds and two accenting baguettes). "He chose right. It really fits Whitney." Bischoff agrees: "I love it! But the best part is that Chris picked it out himself."

and I saw how she reacted to being on the farm, I felt like I could see a part of her life being in Arlington. And seeing her with my family, I felt like she was a missing piece.

The idea of moving to a small farm town was a thread throughout the season [see box]. How important was it to you to find someone who could live there?

CHRIS: There is a part of me that is self-conscious about Arlington. Not everybody is willing to live in a community that small. It was an issue when I was on The Bachelorette with Andi [Dorfman], and it was always something that was in the back of my mind throughout the process of being on The Bachelor.

What was your take on it, Whitney?

WHITNEY: I was the last girl to go home with him, but maybe that was a little bit of an advantage because I got to hear everyone's take. By the time I saw it, I knew it was going to be small. I can't say I knew it was going to be that small, but I was prepared!

Chris, you had told Andi that there was an "opportunity to be a homemaker" in Arlington. Whitney has a successful career. Do you want a wife who works or who stays at home?

CHRIS: I want someone who has both, to a certain extent. Someone who has a career and is driven, like Whitney, and now wants to have the next chapter and be a mother.

WHITNEY: My entire life I always knew I wanted to be a wife and a mom, but I think it's important to establish yourself and work hard. My career is something that defines me. It's important to me, and it's something I'm passionate about. But once I have kids, absolutely I would love to be able to stay at home with them.

CHRIS: I want Whitney to be happy—that's most important, [whether] it's working and raising children or being a stay-at-home mother. I think it's a blessing to be able to stay at home. You can always go back to your career. [Dads] stay at home too, though that is something I don't plan on being!

Will you move to Iowa right away?

WHITNEY: We're moving to L.A. [for Dancing with the Stars] first. But I own my place in Chicago and don't plan on selling that. I'm keeping my job, but I've kind of switched roles a bit. It offers me a lot of flexibility so I can work from anywhere. I think it will be a good transition for us to start the journey together in L.A., and then we can take the next step.

CHRIS: From L.A. to Arlington. A great transition. They're similar places!

What do you look forward to about life in Arlington?

CHRIS: Building a family together is No. 1. And having Whitney be part of the farming operation. It would be a really cool thing.

WHITNEY: I have no plans to quit my job. I won't lose myself in a man. But I know [farming] is something Chris is so passionate about. I'd like to learn about it, and I hope that our children can learn the trade as well. I think I look pretty good on the combine!

CHRIS: There are plenty of things you would look better than me doing!

Whitney, what will you miss most about life in Chicago?

WHITNEY: I have a great support system and group of girls back home. When it comes to my job or my friendships, anything I focus on I'm going to give 100 percent.

CHRIS: But we'll get there in Arlington. It might take some time. What I love most about Whitney is I feel like we have not only a strong connection, but we have a partnership.

Arlington
where hills and prairie meet

DOWN ON THE FARM
Back on his farm "it's all corn and soybeans, and we raise hogs," says Soules. Not to mention hard work. "We work 15 to 18 hours a day sometimes, and I'm there, on the tractor, making things happen."

Inside the Tiny Town of Arlington, Iowa

Chris and Whitney crashed a glamorous wedding on The Bachelor, but date nights in Iowa will be decidedly more low-key. The nearest movie theater (just one screen!) is "a solid 20 miles away," says Soules. And pizza delivery? "No way! We're in the middle of nowhere." And Whitney will surely become a regular at Arlington's only commercial business: Charley's Quik Shop. "You can get everything there," says Soules of the gas station mini-mart. "Six-packs of beer, chips, Advil, toilet paper. I spend a lot of time there!"

TOP: NEAL KUEHL

A NEW CHAPTER
"The whole Bachelor journey was mentally and emotionally taxing," says Soules. "But it was a great experience, and it brought me to Whitney." Adds Bischoff: "I'm grateful. And I'm ready to move forward!"

Will you have a long or short engagement?

WHITNEY: I don't think you can put a time limit on something like that. We're taking it step by step. When we feel it, it will happen. But I anticipate it working out. I plan to do this once!

Has it been hard watching the show? Chris kissed a lot of women.

CHRIS: It's tough to relive hurting others.

WHITNEY: I actually haven't watched. I lived it! One thing that I respect the most about Chris is that he did everything 100 percent. Does it make me feel warm and fuzzy inside [that he had strong feelings for other girls]? No. But is it a realistic thing? Yes.

What have you discovered about each other postshow?

WHITNEY: I'm learning things about myself because I've never lived with a man. In the morning I cannot speak before I've had two cups of coffee. We haven't spent that much time together. We'll continue to learn.

CHRIS: Whitney is who she is. She's thoughtful and loving. And we're both very real. So it's been a pretty smooth transition in that regard.

What do you hope for your future?

WHITNEY: I'm looking forward to the life that we're going to start. I think a lot of great things are going to happen.

CHRIS: We had this great love story that now we get to build upon. We can start with a new love story in real life. Whitney is exactly who I've been looking for for a long time. She's what I've always wanted. ●

BACHELORETTE BOMBSHELL!

Kaitlyn & Britt Face Off in the New Season

The most dramatic Bachelorette announcement in history? In a (nearly) unprecedented move, ABC announced that fan favorite Kaitlyn Bristowe and emotional beauty Britt Nilsson will battle it out to be the Bachelorette. The two will both meet the 25 male contestants on the first night, but in a twist reminiscent of Byron Velvick's season of The Bachelor, "the men are going to have the ultimate say about who they think would make the best wife," host Chris Harrison explained on the After the Final Rose special. While Nilsson called it "an amazing opportunity," Bristowe said her initial reaction was, "Well, that's not ideal," but also quipped, "I just know we'll end up in the same hot tub at some point."

KATE WINSLET ON Love, Kids & Her Next Act

BACK ONSCREEN IN INSURGENT, THE STAR TALKS ABOUT HER SURPRISING NEW LIFE

BY MARY GREEN

ROCKNROLL MARRIAGE
Winslet and her husband (in Hong Kong in 2012) met after surviving a fire at Richard Branson's Caribbean compound.

Despite earning six Oscar nominations (with one win, for The Reader) and starring in one of the biggest blockbusters of all time, Titanic, Kate Winslet is still seeking career advice—from her older kids Mia, 14, and Joe, 11. "They do very much have an opinion on what I do and don't do these days," she says, laughing. So when she was asked to star as malevolent leader Jeanine in the Divergent series, based on Veronica Roth's bestsellers, they said, " 'Yeah, Mom, you should definitely do it!' The idea that their mom would play this baddie was incredibly exciting," she says. Happily creating a new chapter in her life with husband Ned Rocknroll, their son Bear, 1, and several new roles, Winslet isn't at all fazed about turning 40 this year. "I don't know why, but I've never felt more confident and happy."

BACK TO WORK
1. She plays one of the designers of Versailles in the upcoming A Little Chaos (with Jennifer Ehle). "It was nice to be in a period film again," she says. 2. With Ansel Elgort in Insurgent. 3. She'll play early Apple employee Joanna Hoffman in Steve Jobs.

Insurgent* brought out her wicked side.
Winslet plays her first true villain in Jeanine, who hunts Shailene Woodley's Tris in the series' second film. "We were looking for power and command and smarts, which Kate delivers in spades, but she also gave Jeanine style and glamour," say producers Doug Wick and Lucy Fisher. Winslet says her intimidating onscreen persona didn't freak out her kids. "I'm their mom, and they're never scared of me! So, no, the crazy act didn't work on them."

She's on a roll—with Ned Rocknroll.
Winslet married the British businessman (born Abel Smith, he's the nephew of Virgin mogul Richard Branson) in 2012 and welcomed baby Bear a year later. She credits her husband with helping her find balance between her movie roles and family time at their home base in the U.K. And she's on a busy streak with up to five films coming out this year, including Oscar hopeful Steve Jobs, which she's shooting now. "My creative life in the last few years has been really, really colorful for me. I have a wonderful man in my life who is so incredibly supportive that it makes it possible for me to have those experiences," she says. "I've got a really wonderful little family. We all laugh a lot."

Her kids actually get along.
Mia (her daughter with first husband Jim Threapleton) and Joe (her son with second husband Sam Mendes) "love" having a baby brother, she says. "They're absolutely adorable together. They're very helpful, I must say. I really love hanging out with my kids. They're terrific people. They're kind of happy in who they are, too, and that's all you can really hope for for them, that they love being themselves."

'I'm definitely going to get to my 40th birthday and feel I've earned it'

She's not afraid of her big birthday.
"I'm turning 40 this year, and I'm definitely going to get to my birthday [in October] and feel I've earned it," she says. She laughs at any suggestion that she's barely aged. "I have the kind of wrinkles that are here to stay now. You know, not just the ones where you wake up in the morning and you go, 'Oh, that will go away in two hours' time.' No, they're there. That's the way that it is."

Regrets? She has one.
"I chose to have children quite young, and I wouldn't change any part of that at all," she says. "But I didn't go to college. I started working quite young and had a lot of responsibilities. I do notice the life of a college student, that while there is incredibly hard work, there is still room for plenty of fun and plenty of experience and probably experiment as well. I really don't long for it or wish that I'd had it, but I'm curious what that might have been like . . . just for a week."

What's next?
"To be perfectly honest with you, I'm looking forward to having a bit of a break. I have been working quite a lot, and while that has been fantastic, it will be lovely to have downtime. So there's a lot to look forward to. I'm very lucky." ●

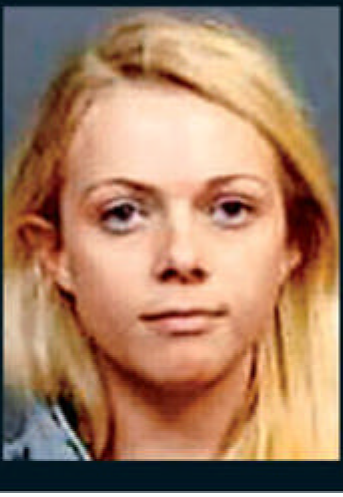
A GROOM'S DEADLY SCHEME

A Wedding to Kill For

A LOCAL THEATER STAR, DANIEL WOZNIAK CONFESSED TO A GRISLY DOUBLE HOMICIDE—AND COPS SAY WEDDING BILLS WERE THE MOTIVE

The Killer and the Bride

He was an actor who "had performing under his belt," former pal Alex Syiek says of Wozniak (after his 2010 arrest). Buffett (after her 2012 arrest) was raised with "homeschool values," adds Syiek.



Daniel Wozniak had a lot to celebrate: The well-known Costa Mesa, Calif., theater actor was getting married in a little more than a week, and he and his beautiful actress fiancée, Rachel Buffett, had both scored lead roles in a local production of the musical Nine. But underneath his joyful, charismatic facade, Wozniak was hiding secrets that quickly turned deadly. On the verge of being evicted from his apartment and without the money he needed for his wedding or honeymoon, police say, an increasingly desperate Wozniak carried out a shocking get-rich-quick scheme that ended in a brutal double homicide. "I didn't think he was capable of this," says a longtime friend of Wozniak's. "Then again, anyone is capable of anything when your life is crashing around you. I think he felt his was. And he wanted to give Rachel everything in the world."

It came at a staggering price. Wozniak, now 31, is in Orange County jail facing trial in the upcoming months on two counts of felony murder in the May 2010 deaths of his neighbor Samuel Herr, 26, an Afghanistan war veteran, and Juri "Julie" Kibuishi, 23, a college student studying fashion. (His former fiancée, Buffett, 27, has been charged as an accessory after the fact but is free on bond and denies any involvement.) Police zeroed in on Wozniak after he pocketed money from Herr's bank account and arrested him at his bachelor party just two days before the wedding. "I'm crazy and I did it," he confessed to police. "He was a financial mess," said Det. Michael Delgadillo, according to grand jury testimony. "He had no way of paying for the wedding or the honeymoon. He wanted to go on a cruise, and he had no way of paying for it."

The Victims: A War Vet and a Student Who 'Loved Fashion'

Herr "was a guy people liked having around," says his friend Larry Gonzales. "He had your back. He was always joking." Kibuishi "was the loveliest girl," says her friend Alison Dambach. "She always had a smile and was so full of life."

According to court documents, the groom-to-be lured his neighbor Herr—who had amassed some $50,000 in combat-pay savings—into the attic of an empty theater on the Joint Forces Training Base in Los Alamitos, Calif., where he fatally shot him twice in the head with a .38-cal. semiautomatic pistol he'd stolen from his father's home. Astonishingly, Wozniak then hit the stage as scheduled in Nine. "People really did genuinely love him—he was the life of the party," says Debbie Guajardo, who caught his performance the week of the murders. "He was happy. Everything seemed great."

Following the show, Wozniak lured Kibuishi to Herr's apartment by posing as Herr via texts from the dead man's phone. When she arrived, Wozniak fatally shot her twice in the head with the same pistol and posed her body in an attempt to frame Herr. "He said he tried to orchestrate it to try to make it look like it was Sam who had [killed Julie] out of a rage of jealousy," Delgadillo testified. To complete the scene, Wozniak returned to the theater attic and meticulously dismembered Herr's body, scattering the pieces throughout El Dorado Nature Center in Long Beach.

That the charismatic Wozniak could commit a crime so gruesome has stunned all who knew him. "He always made you laugh, and you could always talk to him," says his friend Janelle Mortensen. A film buff who grew up in a middle-class home in Long Beach, he was eager to include his friends in his wedding day, says Mortensen, who received an invitation: "He was so excited."

Friends and family of Herr and Kibuishi say both were known to offer help to pals in need—making them unwitting prey in Wozniak's murderous plan. "Sam saved every penny during deployment," says his dad, Steve. His late son, he adds, "would give you the shirt off his back." Similarly, loved ones describe Kibuishi as a nurturer who had been tutoring Herr in his community college courses. "She was the one who always took care of everyone," says her mom, June. "She always wanted to do things for others."

> 'He took a lot of time planning what he did. I just can't wrap my head around it'
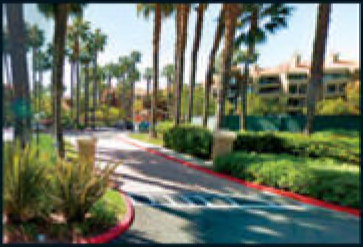
> —DEBBIE GUAJARDO

As the court date continues to face delays, leading to mounting frustration for the victims' families, those who knew Wozniak remain baffled. "Who was the real Dan?" asks Guajardo. "He was a great actor, because he sure had all of us fooled."

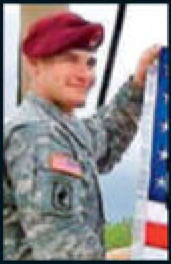
By Michelle Tauber. Christine Pelisek in Costa Mesa

A Gruesome Plot Unfolds

2010 Wozniak and Herr meet as neighbors at the Camden Village apartment complex in Costa Mesa. "Sammy had a heart of gold," says Herr's aunt Miriam Nortman.

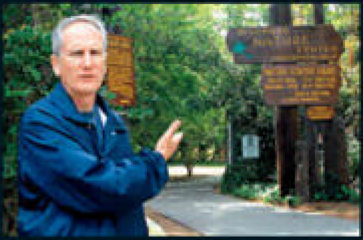


MAY 21, 2010 Wozniak lures Herr to the Los Alamitos Joint Training military base theater, killing him with two shots.



MAY 21, 2010 That evening, Wozniak performs the lead role in the musical Nine at a local community theater.

MAY 21, 2010 After the show Wozniak kills Kibuishi and poses her body in an attempt to frame Herr for the crime.



MAY 22, 2010 Wozniak dismembers Herr's body—which had an identifying tattoo—and scatters the parts in El Dorado Nature Center, where Capt. Ron Smith of the Costa Mesa Police Dept. (pictured) directed the search.

MAY 27, 2010 Wozniak is arrested at his bachelor party and confesses to the crimes in interrogation.

THE STARS OF CINDERELLA

Living the Fairy Tale

Taking an enchanted leap from TV (Downton Abbey and Game of Thrones), rising stars Lily James and Richard Madden reinvent a Disney classic. All about the new Cinderella and her dashing Prince

BY JENNIFER GARCIA

As they step into the grass high in the hills overlooking L.A., Richard Madden extends his hand to help costar Lily James find her footing. He comes across every bit as chivalrous in real life as the Prince Charming he plays in Disney's new live-action reinvention of Cinderella. "My idea of Prince Charming is someone who has a sense of humor, awareness of his privilege and a compassion for the people around him," says Madden. "My biggest challenge was trying to create a man who was worthy of Cinderella's affection, rather than have her just be lucky that she was having a prince come and save her."

James and Madden are making their own luck too. After breakout roles on TV—Downton Abbey's free-spirited Lady Rose for her, Game of Thrones' swashbuckling Robb Stark for him—the classically trained young actors jumped at the chance to bring the fairy tale's characters alive. "I grew up with the princess films," says Surrey native James, 25, who credits her family's love of music, dance and theater with inspiring her career. "In my house there was always storytelling." Scottish-born Madden, 28, calls Game of Thrones "a mad journey"—he's still close friends with much of the cast—and a perfect career launching pad. On Cinderella, "it was nice to be on a set where I wasn't in fear of my life," he says with a laugh.

"I put on that gown for the first time and I looked in the mirror and sort of gasped," says James. "I couldn't believe it was me."

James and Madden, who both envision the perfect weekend as involving "a good book," will reunite in 2016 on the London stage for Romeo and Juliet. Their significant others are costars too, from the U.K. series Doctor Who: She dates Matt Smith, 32, and he dates Jenna Coleman, 28. Is there such a thing as true love? "I really do believe in it," says James. "In life, you meet people and this connection happens and you feel enriched because you know them. You feel like you can achieve anything." ●

All About Cinderella's Costumes!

1. Cinderella's iconic ball gown "needed to be big but look like it was made of air," says costume designer Sandy Powell, a three-time Oscar winner. A corset (no CGI) gave James that tiny waist, and she and Madden "had to develop ways of dancing so they wouldn't be treading on the skirt." Jokes Madden: "There were three of us in the relationship. It was Cinderella, her dress and me!" 2. Cate Blanchett collaborated with Powell on the stepmother's look, inspired by steely '40s sirens like Joan Crawford. Says Powell of Blanchett: "She likes clothes, and she knows how to wear them." 3. "They're ugly from within. We wanted them to be pretty and vain and silly," says Powell of the stepsisters. —JEFF NELSON & SCOTT HUVER

FROM DOWNTON TO DISNEY!

It's an upstairs-downstairs switch! Sophie McShera, who as servant Daisy cooked for James's aristocratic Rose on Downton Abbey (near left), plays one of the wicked stepsisters who boss Cinderella around. McShera loved the costume upgrade: "I was so excited!"

MO'NE DAVIS

Throws Like a Girl

THE 13-YEAR-OLD PHENOM OPENS UP ABOUT DREAMING BIG, PRACTICING HARD AND PITCHING HARDER

For baseball sensation Mo'ne Davis—who became the first female pitcher to win a game in last summer's Little League World Series (she pitched a shutout!)—the past few months "seem like a pretty cool dream." The South Philly eighth grader at Springside Chestnut Hill Academy became a celebrity overnight—appearing in a Chevy commercial, donating her jersey to the National Baseball Hall of Fame and being named Sports Illustrated Kids SportsKid of the Year. Baseball season has just begun, so Davis is back on the mound practicing seven days a week. "I can feel when I'm going to throw a strike," Davis says. "Right before I release it, I feel it in my hand." But the honor roll student still finds time to play video games (NBA 2K15 is a fave) and rock out to Fifth Harmony. And although her fastball has been clocked at a blistering 71 mph, her real love is basketball: "Hopefully I'll play pro one day." (If her killer move on Kevin Hart at last month's NBA All-Star Celebrity Game is any indication, she has a shot!) For now, she's just living out her personal motto: "Follow your dreams and don't let anybody ever stop you." –JOHNNY DODD

Mo'ne Davis (here with Kevin Hart) plays baseball, basketball and soccer.

WANT MORE MO'NE? Check out her memoir Remember My Name, out March 17. Davis, who admits English is her least favorite subject, says, "It was exciting to write. I got to think about all the fun I've had."

When she was diagnosed, "I said to Bailey, 'I'm so sorry,'" says Christy (at home with Bailey). "I was really saying, 'I'm sorry I'm going to leave you without a mom.'"

MOM WITH TERMINAL CANCER

I Want to Die on My Terms

CHRISTY O'DONNELL, 46, HAS END-STAGE LUNG CANCER—AND IS FIGHTING FOR THE RIGHT TO END HER OWN LIFE BY NICOLE WEISENSEE EGAN

Tucked away in a closet in Christy O'Donnell's Valencia, Calif., home is a white binder entitled "Bailey's To-Do List." Inside are meticulously detailed instructions on everything from Christy's will to her power of attorney, along with a sealed letter the 46-year-old former LAPD sergeant and trial attorney wrote to her daughter Bailey Donorovich, 20. (Instruction No. 1: "Read my letter!") The folder is ready for Bailey to open at what will surely be the toughest moment of her young life. "The chance of my daughter coming home and finding me dead is fairly high," Christy tells People. "A 20-year-old is going to panic."

In anticipation of death, as she always has in life, she wants her daughter to be prepared. Diagnosed last June with terminal lung cancer that had spread to her brain, Christy knows the end is near, but she is fighting with every ounce of energy she has for control over her final moments. Inspired by Brittany Maynard—the terminally ill 29-year-old who captured the world's attention when she legally ended her life Nov. 1 under Oregon's "death with dignity" law—Christy is pushing for passage of a similar law in California, which was Maynard's home state as well. (It was Maynard's campaign that got the legislation introduced in California in January; hearings begin March 25.) If Christy's disease takes its natural course, she's been told, "I will drown in my own fluids," she says. "That's not an experience anyone would want."

Right now, Christy is riding the roller coaster of a terminal illness. "On my good days I feel fatigued," says Christy, who has lost much of her long brown hair to chemo. "On my bad days I'm bedridden with headaches." While one-shot radiation reduced the size of her brain tumors, Dr. Karo Arzoo, her hematologist/oncologist at UCLA, says "there is currently no cure" for her lung cancer, and she is ineligible for most clinical trials. For now, he says, the plan is for chemotherapy every three weeks. For how long? "Until it stops working or the side effects become intolerable." Going public about their battle was not an easy decision for mother or daughter. Before she spoke with PEOPLE, Christy had told only a handful of family members, friends and coworkers about her illness. Bailey, a college sophomore who works full-time at a pet store, is so painfully shy "she's taking a speech class ONLINE," Christy says, laughing. Bailey teases her mom for being as chatty as she is quiet. "She'll talk to you forever!" Of the cancer, Bailey says, "I barely talk about it, let alone with people I don't know."

The two have always been inseparable. Christy, who is twice divorced and raised Bailey mostly as a single mom, went to law school while working as a cop. She got permission to take Bailey, then 6, to class with her one semester because Bailey was having separation anxiety. "She came with her blankie, coloring books and a mini video player—with headphones—for her Disney movies," recalls Christy, smiling at the memory. "She sat under the table, hanging on to my pant leg. She's always come first."

Christy was thriving as a partner in a law firm when, one morning last June, she found she couldn't understand words in the legal documents she was reading. After a series of tests, she got the diagnosis: stage 4 lung adenocarcinoma with a prognosis of less than six months—a grim timeline she has beaten. Not yet in need of in-home care, she has a close circle of relatives and friends who check in with her daily. She is determined to stay alive until Bailey's 21st birthday on June 23: They have been planning a trip to the Atlantis resort in the Bahamas along with other close family. "To have her there would mean everything to me," Bailey says.

Before then, Christy is focused on making progress in her right-to-die campaign, with help from Compassion & Choices, with which she's partnered (and which also worked with Maynard). She knows it won't be easy. "Our concern," says Marilyn Golden, a spokeswoman for Californians Against Assisted Suicide, "is not for the people who would willingly use this but for the many who would be endangered without their consent by such a law."

If right-to-die legislation doesn't come in time for her, "I won't break the law," Christy says. "I've spent my entire career upholding it." But she's hoping that on July 1, after that birthday trip to the Bahamas, she can end her life in her own bed with her daughter holding her hand. "That was our plan," she says. "It's an injustice that I can't die the way I want to." ●

Comfort Food Made Healthy

VEGAN CHEF JERRI HASTEY (YES, JESSICA CHASTAIN'S MOM!) DISHES ON HER FOOD TRUCK IN SANTA ROSA, CALIF.

Jessica bought you the Seed on the Go food truck in 2014. How did that come about? Jessica is a loving and generous person, but I was completely blown away when she offered to buy me the truck! She knows how much joy there is for me to make and share food.

Are all your customers vegan? I find that most aren't vegan or even vegetarian—they just like the food. Eating vegan doesn't have to be an absolute choice, just one that you can explore and enjoy.

What's Jessica's favorite dish? She loves the mac 'n' cheese [see right]. Both of us enjoy eating healthy, plant-based meals, but sometimes you just want comfort food. This is a win-win!

What makes it a healthier option? The sweet potato and quinoa pasta create a yummy, creamy texture that is low in fat and high in protein. And don't get me started on the benefits of a dairy-free diet! I could go on and on.

1 tbsp. fresh lemon juice
1 cup unsweetened almond milk
1 tbsp. sriracha chili sauce
8 oz. nondairy cheddar cheese, shredded
Chives, for garnish

1. Heat oven to 400°. Pierce sweet potato several times with a fork. Place the sweet potato on a baking sheet lined with foil. Bake until tender, about 45 minutes. Remove skin from sweet potato and set aside.

2. In a mixing bowl toss together mushrooms, oil, liquid smoke and ½ tsp. salt. Place on a foil-lined baking sheet and cook for 10 minutes, stirring once. Remove from oven and set aside.

3. Lower oven to 350°. Cook pasta until al dente, about 8 minutes; reserve ½ cup pasta cooking water. Stir together sweet potato, pasta water, 1 tsp. salt, butter and next 6 ingredients until smooth. Fold in pasta and mushrooms and bake, covered, in a lightly greased 11-x-7-in. baking dish for 30 minutes. Remove from oven and let sit for 5 minutes. Sprinkle with chopped chives and serve.

Serves 6 to 8 Prep time: 15 minutes
Cook time: 1 hour 30 minutes

My American Dream

GREAT SUCCESS AGAINST ALL ODDS

FROM A POOR CHILDHOOD TO A BUN EMPIRE

CORDIA HARRINGTON / Founder & CEO, The Bun Companies

THE WOMAN BEHIND A $100 MILLION A YEAR BAKED-GOODS BUSINESS SHARES THE STRUGGLES SHE OVERCAME—AND THE SECRETS OF HER SUCCESS

AT AGE 7 "I never felt as poor as we were," says Harrington (on left, with sister Becky).

Cordia Harrington remembers the way her mother scrimped to buy her one pair of shoes every year—and how she got her clothes as hand-me-downs from a wealthy cousin. "I'm such a glass-full kind of girl, I wasn't ashamed," says Harrington, whose father worked as a salesman by day and cleaned floors at night to make ends meet after the family settled in St. Louis. "I knew I was loved. My parents saw hope and potential in us." Harrington, 61, more than realized that potential, growing up to found the Bun Companies, a $100 million annual business in Nashville that bakes 7 million rolls, muffins, biscuits and buns a day for clients like McDonald's, Pepperidge Farm and KFC.

First taste of success: In the fifth grade Harrington started her own neighborhood daycare center, charging a quarter per kid per week. "I was always driven," she says. After graduating college, she used all $587 of her savings to launch a real estate business and later parlayed that into a string of McDonald's franchises.

Days of doubt: After her first marriage broke up in 1988, Harrington was left in debt, raising three boys, ages 7 and under. "I was scared to death. Many mornings driving to work, tears would be streaming down my face as I watched the sun come up."

Words she lives by: "Just don't give up," says Harrington. "People will say, 'You're nuts,' but if you have something in your heart, go for it." –EILEEN FINAN

Tracy Anderson

What I Eat in a Day

'MY BIGGEST CONCERN IS EATING FOOD FREE OF CHEMICALS,' SAYS THE 5-FT. FITNESS EXPERT AND MOM OF TWO WHO JUST LAUNCHED AN ONLINE-VIDEO-STREAMING PROGRAM

Breakfast

10 oz. black coffee and 2 morning smoothies:
1 to 1½ cups water
A handful of spinach and romaine lettuce
1 to 2 stalks of celery
1 pear
1 to 2 tsp. lemon juice
2 scoops of TA Wellness Formula in vanilla

Hydration
Tracy drinks 4 to 5 16-oz. bottles of water throughout the day.

Lunch

Quinoa salad with chicken:
½ cup cooked quinoa
2 tbsp. flaxseeds
¼ tomato, diced
¼ cup diced red onion
8 oz. grilled chicken
Dressing:
1 to 2 tsp. lemon juice
2 to 3 tsp. olive oil
½ tsp. chopped cilantro
⅛ tsp. each sea salt and chipotle powder

Snack

Green & Black's Organic Milk Chocolate Bar

Dinner at Nobu

Cooked salmon roll with avocado and cucumber
Grilled shrimp with roasted tomatoes and peppers
Glass of red wine

Total Calories:

1,700

The Verdict "Tracy suffers from low blood sugar and has a nursing daughter with a dairy allergy, so she sticks to a gluten-free, low-carb, lactose-free diet," says Dr. Richard Firshein of the Firshein Center for Comprehensive Medicine. "She could consume an additional 300 calories based on her size and activity level, however. I'd like to see her eat two or three more healthy snacks, such as veggies with hummus—the fiber would keep her feeling full."

Christie Brinkley's

Ageless Skin Secrets

How does Christie Brinkley look this incredible at 61? Sure, she works out and eats well (her favorite snack is an apple), but the supermodel also knows a few beauty tricks that pick up where her amazing genes leave off.

How do you take care of your skin? I've been exfoliating for the past 40 years! At the beginning of my career, I read that men look about five years younger than women because they shave every day, which exfoliates the skin and gives it a fresh appearance. I thought, "I don't want men to have a five-year advantage on me. I'm going to exfoliate too."

And now you have your own product line. They say if you can't find what you need, create it. I wanted the best anti-aging ingredients and environmentally sensitive packaging.

What's the first thing you do in the morning? I make a cup of warm water with lemon. Some days I add a little manuka honey and cayenne pepper [on the rim] to jump-start my body.

How do you keep your stomach in shape? Planks [she does them daily].

And your arms? I use my neck cream on them. It has special tighteners.

Any good hair tips? I wear my own line of extensions, Hair2Wear.

Is it annoying or flattering to hear people say, "You look good for your age"? I prefer "You look good," but when they add "for your age," I'm still flattered.

Brinkley says her day cream, which shields skin from UVA, UVB and infrared rays, "is like having a giant umbrella over you."

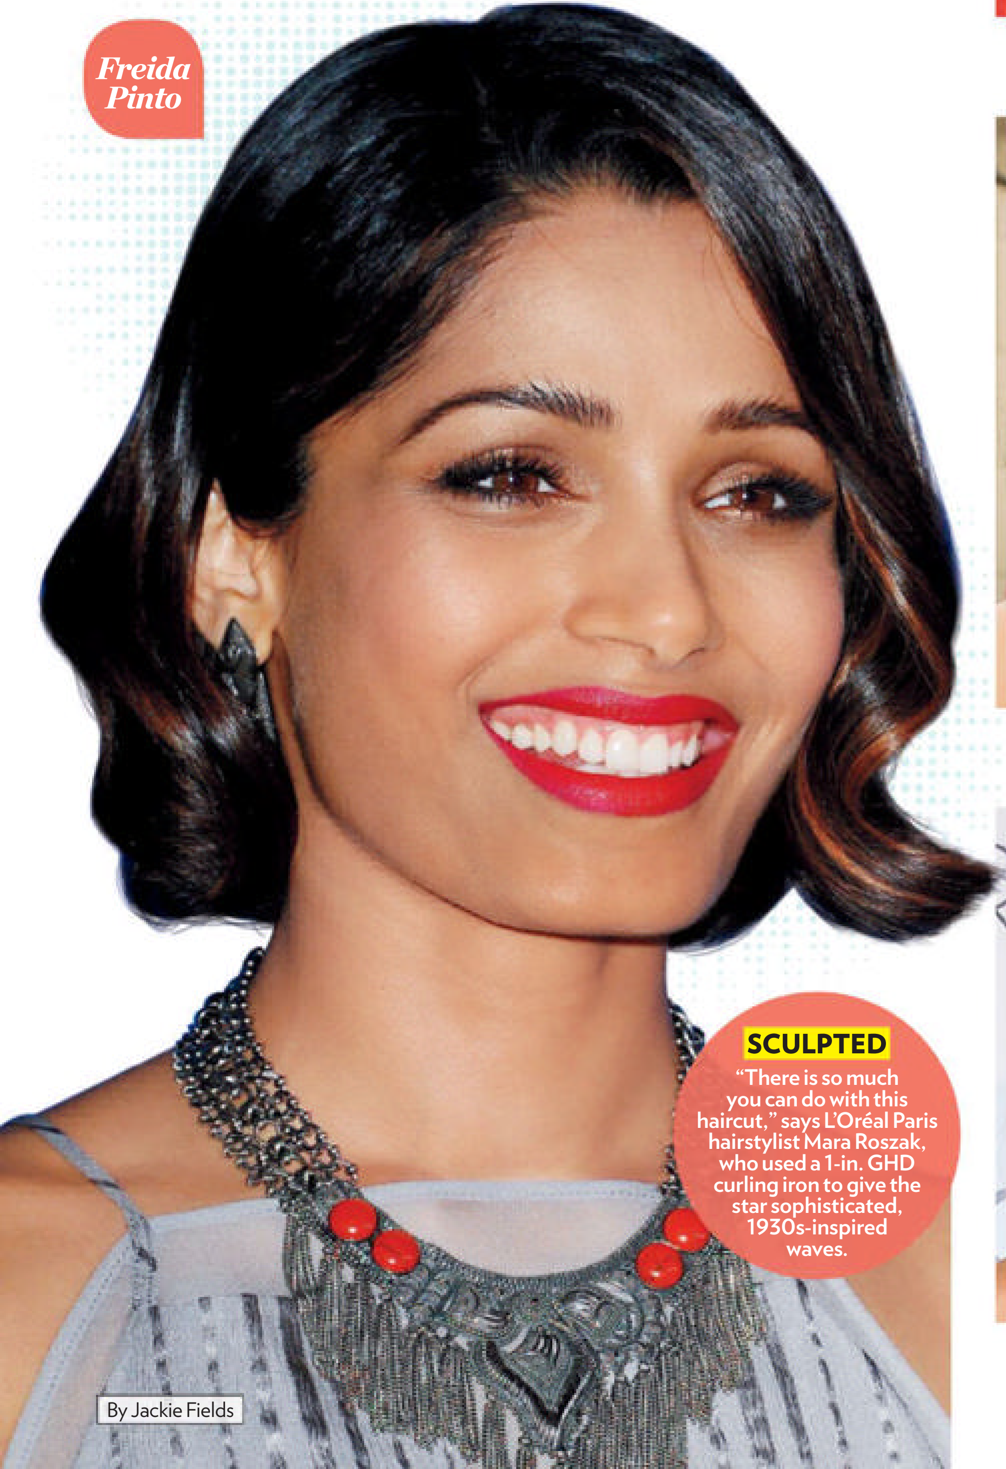
1 Bob, 4 Ways!

FREIDA PINTO'S FRESH BOB, AND EVERY SINGLE WAY SHE STYLES IT, HAS US WANTING TO MAKE THE CUT TOO

Freida Pinto is addicted to her new do. The proof? After turning her shoulder-grazing lob (a long bob) into a chin-length bob last November, the actress told her hairstylist Shaylee Blatz a mere two months later, "I want to go shorter!" Blatz obliged and gave Pinto highlights. "Because Freida's hair is straight, it was important I did a piecey cut and dimensional color to create the appearance of texture."

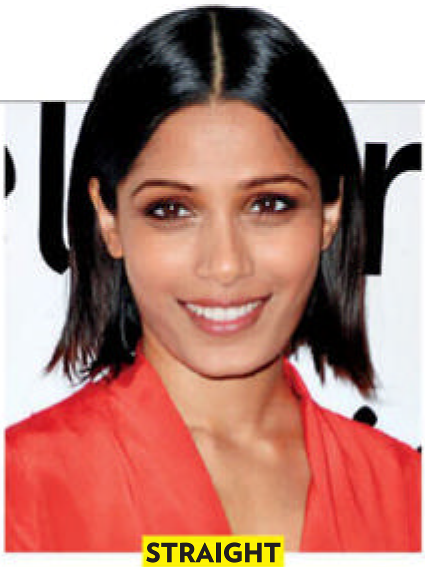


Freida Pinto

SCULPTED

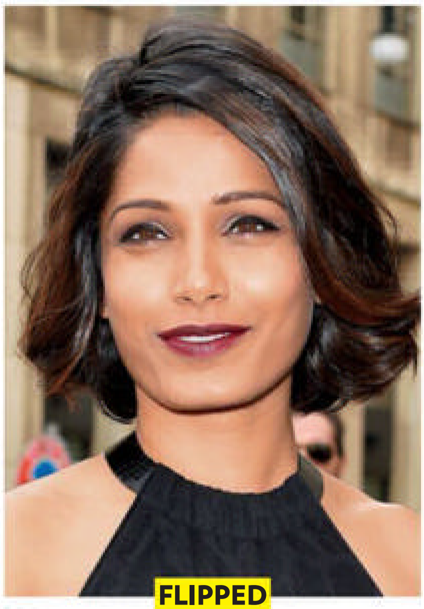
"There is so much you can do with this haircut," says L'Oréal Paris hairstylist Mara Roszak, who used a 1-in. GHD curling iron to give the star sophisticated, 1930s-inspired waves.

By Jackie Fields



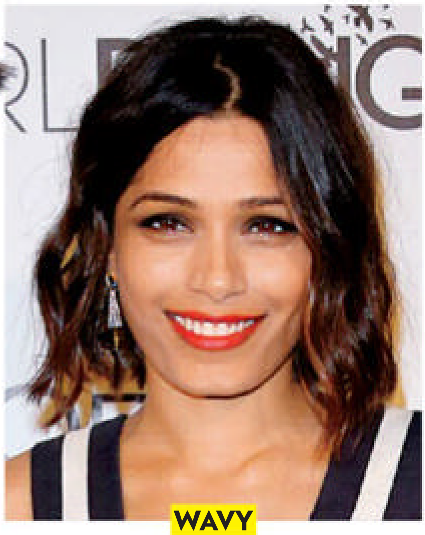
STRAIGHT

"We were in Miami, so the vibe called for a sleek look, almost as if she was fresh out of the water," says hairstylist Bryce Scarlett.



FLIPPED

The actress made a statement of her own at Milan Fashion Week, pairing her subtly streaked bob with a deep berry lip.



WAVY

Pinto provided plenty of warm-weather inspiration when she paired a bright orange lip with beachy waves.

10 YEARS, 20 SEASONS NONSTOP

AFTER MORE THAN 200 CELEBRITIES, GALLONS OF SELF-TANNER AND COUNTLESS SEQUINS, ABC'S HIT CELEBRATES A MILESTONE

AMAZING VICTORIES

Amber Riley & Derek Hough
SEASON 17
Despite a nagging knee injury, the Glee actress became the first African-American woman to win the mirror ball trophy. "I want to let women of all sizes know you can do whatever you put your mind to," she said at the time.

J.R. Martinez & Karina Smirnoff
SEASON 13
Martinez, formerly an actor on All My Children, was a crowd favorite for having overcome the trauma of being burned on over 34 percent of his body while serving as an infantryman in Iraq in 2003. "I want to sleep with this thing," he said of the trophy.

Alfonso Ribeiro & Witney Carson
SEASON 19
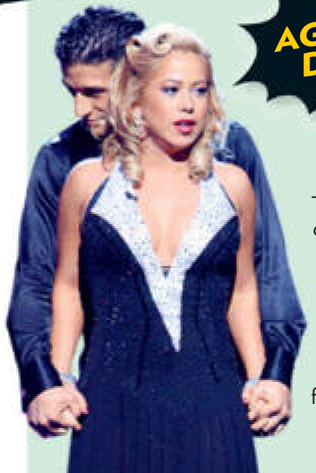
The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air star was a lock to win after he re-created his character's goofy signature dance move, "The Carlton," during week 4. "I never thought it'd still be something 20-something years later," he said of the dance.

AGONIZING DEFEATS



Sabrina Bryan & Mark Ballas
SEASON 5
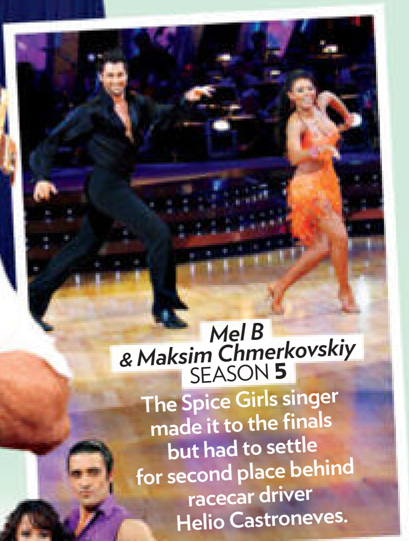
The very definition of gettin' robbed on the dance floor: Despite earning a perfect score of 30 points during week 4, the talented Cheetah Girls singer—and favorite for the finals—was inexplicably booted on week 6.



Mel B & Maksim Chmerkovskiy
SEASON 5
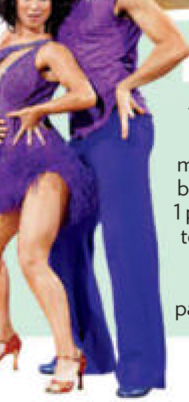
The Spice Girls singer made it to the finals but had to settle for second place behind racecar driver Helio Castroneves.



Gilles Marini & Cheryl Burke
SEASON 8
The sexy French-American actor made it to the finals but lost by less than 1 percent of the vote to then 17-year-old gymnast Shawn Johnson and her partner, Mark Ballas.

Drama!

WARDROBE WHOOPS!

KIRSTIE ALLEY'S SHOE FALLS OFF

SEASON 12

During a waltz with partner Maksim Chmerkovskiy, the actress lost her shoe but not her cool. She finished the dance and got a respectable score of 22.

BRISTOL PALIN WEARS A GORILLA SUIT

SEASON 11

Bristol and partner Mark Ballas began their jive to "Hey Hey We're the Monkees" in, yep, hairy ape suits, before ripping them off to reveal their clothing underneath.

KELLY MONACO'S DRESS BREAKS

SEASON 15

The General Hospital actress's sexy samba got steamier when her strap snapped; she had to continue while holding her bustier up with one hand.

INFAMOUS MISSTEPS

MARIE OSMOND FAINTS

SEASON 5

The singer collapsed in front of a stunned audience after her samba with partner Jonathan Roberts, who broke her fall as help rushed in. "You [could] really hear her hyperventilating," said host Tom Bergeron.

KATE GOSSELIN'S PASO DOBLE FAUX PAS

SEASON 10

After partner Tony Dovolani almost quit on the reality star for calling him a bad teacher, the mom of eight showed off her own considerable lack of skills with this painfully wooden number.

MAKS SAYS DWTS IS 'MY SHOW'

SEASON 13

The Ukrainian-American dance pro lost his cool after judge Len Goodman called his rumba with Hope Solo the "worst dance of the season." Moments later Maks barked, "With all due respect, this is my show."

One Last Thi

Matthew Perry

The actor, 45, stars in the CBS remake of The Odd Couple, airing Thursdays

Last time I took public transportation
That was when I went to see the movie Fletch in 1985. I took the bus to the Sherman Oaks Galleria and back. But of course I was just on a plane like three days ago. I like to indulge my fellow passengers in conversation, and then I watch movies. Although sometimes you just need to sleep.

Last TV obsession
Lost. I watched every episode and would sit there yelling at the TV. I really haven't gotten hooked like that on another show since then.

Last home decorating purchase
I saw a picture of a sports ticker tape in a house, and I said, "You can have one of these at home?!" So I bought one. I got mine first, but now [my Odd Couple character] Oscar has one too.

Last meal I made
A grilled-cheese sandwich. I don't make them often, but I make a good one. When I cut it in half, I make perfectly straight lines. It's usually a last-minute kind of meal, but it's really the only thing I can make.

Last vacation
I recently went to Cabo San Lucas for about a week, and it was lovely. I try to go down there a lot because it's close. It's nice and I just read and relax.
